To the Delegates of the Republican Party, in Convention Assembled:

The undersigned citizens of the United States respectfully beg leave to submit to your honorable body the following appeal:

The United States presents to the world the spectacle of a democratic republic ruling a foreign people, the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands, with substantially autocratic power. The question to which we invite your attention is not by what means that power has been acquired, but how and for what purpose it is to be used.

Upon the answer given to this question will in some measure depend the institutional character of this Republic, as well as its moral standing among the nations of the earth. While some men, high in official authority, insist that the Philippine Islands must be permanently kept in our possession for commercial reasons, we are told by others that the end our Government has in view is not the material exploitation of those islands for our own profit; that, indeed, whatever in money or human life the conquest may have cost us, and whatever the exercise of our rule may still cost us, the "Philippines are to be governed for the Filipinos;" that they are to be instructed and trained in the ways of self-government, until at last they may actually govern themselves and occupy a position of national independence.

We respectfully submit to you that only a frank, definite, and unequivocal profession of such a purpose and the faithful execution of it at a day not unnecessarily delayed will put this Republic in an attitude worthy of its origin, its fundamental principles, and its moral standards. This will be the only consummation sure to secure the contentment of the Filipinos and to win for ourselves the sincere respect of civilized mankind.

It is an unquestioned fact that the Filipinos, high and low, rich and poor, educated and ignorant, almost without exception, however submissive they may appear, at heart ardently long for national independence. Nor is it probable that this longing will cease. For that cause they have fought and shed streams of blood. They have sacrificed for it tens, if not hundreds of thousands of lives. For it they have given their homes to the flames, and their acres to devastation. Such a sentiment never dies in the hearts of a spirited people. However benevolent American rule may be, it will remain to them foreign rule, the rule of a foreign conquerer, and, as such, galling and hateful. Such is human nature; we should despise ourselves if it were not ours, and we respect it in others. That yearning for independence will be all the more intense and enduring, as the Anglo-Saxon and Asiatic races are by no means sympathetic to one another, and as many Anglo-Saxons are but too much inclined to assert their superiority in a manner little mindful of the rights and self-respect of those whom they consider their inferiors.

It is said by men in authority that if we promise the Filipinos their independence at any future day within sight, they will impatiently demand a very early fulfilment of that promise, and that unwholesome agitation and dangerous plotting will be the consequence. As we read the history of the world, it teaches a different lesson. We believe that, on the contrary, the effect of such a promise would be tranquilizing and helpful. If to their question how soon that promise is to be fulfilled, the answer is returned that it will be fulfilled as soon as their machinery of self-government is in orderly operation—it being understood that in our judgment of their doings due allowance will be made for their traditions and their racial peculiarities, and that we do not demand or expect their exercise of the functions of self-government to be more honest and wise than ours is at home—then the effect of our promise will be to stimulate their desire to do their best, and thus to inspire their ambition with good purpose and hope.

But if we cut off their hope, or if we so qualify the promise of independence as to the time and the condition of its fulfilment that the good faith of the promise becomes doubtful, then we may indeed look for secret plottings against American rule and for new upheavals and insurrectionary attempts, especially if the United States should ever become involved in conflicts with foreign nations.

That we are strong enough to keep foreign peoples in subjection against their will, and to rule distant colonies as other governments rule theirs, nobody doubts. But the question is not whether we are able to do so—the question is whether we want to do so, or ought to do so.

We are by no means unmindful of the objection that because of the ignorance of a large part of their population, the Filipinos will be unable to build up and maintain an independent government. Neither do we indulge in the delusion that their government will be all that we might desire. But the Cubans have done well since they were left to themselves, and Mexico, Argentina, Chili and Brazil—after years of turmoil and confusion have at last succeeded in establishing governments commanding the esteem of the world.

As to the danger of some foreign power pouncing upon the independent Philippines, it may well be expected that American diplomacy, backed by the prestige of this great Republic, will be able to protect them against foreign conquest.

Nor is there any doubt that an independent Philippine government would gladly yield to the United States any accommodations for its navy and any commercial facility that may reasonably be desired.

We do not ask that the power of the United States be withdrawn from the Philippines at once and unconditionally. But we do ask, in the name of the fundamental principles upon which the American Republic was built, and in the name of the justice we owe to the foreign people now our subjects, that the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands be granted their national independence as soon as, with the countenance and aid and under the protection of this Republic, they can install a free government of their own. And we most earnestly entreat your honorable body to give expression to this demand in the platform of the political party which you represent.
